Lock screen backgrounds for android

Below are three step-by-step guides on how to change the wallpaper lock screen on an Android device. Lock screen wallpapers for android can easily customize the user's liking. You don't need a special app to change it. The result is a successful change in the wallpaper for your Android device. Method 1: Press step 1 of the Start screen for a long time. Unlock your Android phone, and then long press on a clear area of your Home screen. Step 2: Press Wallpaper. In the pop-up window that appears, click Home and Lock Screens Step 3: Choose a background source. You will have four options to choose from. These are Gallery, Photos, Live Wallpapers, and Wallpapers. Step 4: From your source, select your favorite picture or picture from the camera, saved pictures or screenshots. Step 5: You will be able to crop your image. Drag the edges of the picture to the outlines so that the picture is in good shape. Step 6: Click the Done when you're done. On other devices, it will be Set wallpapers or OK. If you're using local wallpapers just click on it and tap Set Wallpaper Method 2: Use photo or phone gallery If you already have an image that you want to set as lock screen wallpapers saved in Photo/Photo Gallery, this easy method will work perfectly for you too. Step 1: Go to Google Photo or Photo Gallery on your device. Find the picture you want to set as the background image of your Android lock screen. Step 2: Then tap the three points in the upper-right corner of the device screen, and select Use as from the drop down list. Step 3: It will give you several options. Just select Wallpaper and it will be set as the lock screen background. Set Online Images as Wallpapers directly with this method, we can directly identify online images from browsers as start screen or lock screen wallpapers on Android devices, without downloading images to the device first. Step 1: First, open your browser on your Android device and find the picture you want to set as background. Or even better, when you come across a beautiful picture online, you can follow the steps below to set it as wallpaper. Step 2: When you find the picture, press the picture for a long time until a new window appears. Press Save Picture As from Options, and then in Wallpapers. It will be set as lock screen wallpapers on your Android device when you confirm the action. Source: Marc Legace/Android Central One of the easiest ways to add some flair to your new Android phone is by setting a custom background. You can choose from a selection of default wallpapers that came with your phone, use a photo from your gallery, or download a cool background. Diving in phone settings allows you to set a custom image for both the lock screen and the Start screen together or separately, but the process of transferring to the background image of the new Start screen is simple no matter which phone or launcher you're using. Changing wallpapers to Pixel or Stock Android Wallpaper change is mostly the same on all Android phones, but some small differences depend on the phone, which allows you to easily remember it, and easy to do when you upgrade to a new Android device. Tap and hold the home screen. From the drop-down menu, tap Styles and wallpapers. Choose from wallpaper collections on your phone or from third-party apps. Source: Android Central Tap the wallpaper you want to use. Adjust your position and size, and then tap Set a background image in the lower-right corner of the screen. Choose whether you want to set the background image for Start, lock screen, or start and lock screen. Source: Changing the Android Central Wallpaper on a Samsung device Changing wallpaper on a Samsung device is slightly different from the method above. This is because Samsung gives you a few more options than most other phones. and hold on the start screen Tap the wallpaper icon in the lower-left corner. Select your new background from Samsung's My My choose one of your photo galleries, or choose other options under Explore other wallpapers. Is it a tough bridge to cross, which one is a priority? How can you decide? That's rude, man. Here's a clear answer: put one on the lock screen and one on the Start screen. The thing is, if you're using a stock Android device, that was the thing that couldn't happen. You have one wallpaper, and that's it. Bummer. Individual locks and home screen wallpapers are something most third-party Android manufacturers have supported for some time. with the release of Android 7.0 Nougat, however, you can finally live your dream of two different wallpapers on the lock and home screens. Setting it up is pretty simple, with the only warning being that it currently only works with Google Now Launcher. It's a stock launcher for Nexus devices, so if you haven't jumped ship to another, then you're already ready already. If you're currently using another launcher like the awesome Nova Launcher, for example, don't stress. You just need to change the default launcher back to Google Now Launcher in your wallpapers, then you can switch back to Nova. The new wallpapers still stick after launch changes, so it really is just another Steps. So assuming you've already changed back to Google Now Now as default, let's do it. The first thing you need to do is long press on the home screen, which will open the launcher options menu. Then tap Wallpapers. When the Background Pictures menu is open, scroll and find the one you want to set—you can first make a lock screen or a start screen; it does not matter. If you don't see the scrolling list on the wallpaper you want, you can tap the My Photos button to add a picture from your device's internal memory. Once you select a picture, tap it, and then press the Set Wallpaper button in the upper-left corner. A dialog box will open asking if you want to set it as a home screen wall, lock screen wall, or both. Continue and choose the one you're setting up. Once the wallpaper is set, it will ile you back to the home screen. Just repeat the same process to set a different background, and everything is done. It's that simple. If you have changed the launcher to set wallpaper, you can go back to your launcher of choice when both desired wallpapers are set. Enjoy. Enjoy.
